CEO Sells Shares to Satisfy Tax Liability

SOLANA BEACH, CA, Dec 10, 2007 (MARKET WIRE via COMTEX News Network) -- Open Energy Corp. (OTCBB: OEGY) Chairman and Chief Executive David Saltman today addressed shareholder questions concerning his recent sales of securities. Mr. Saltman noted that quarterly stock grants awarded to him under his original employment contract with the Company created a significant personal tax liability. He reported that the proceeds he received from the sale of the securities in recent weeks will be used to pay down those federal and state income taxes.

"I would not have sold my shares but for the need to address this tax obligation," said Saltman. "I have no immediate plans to sell more stock, and remain absolutely committed to building shareholder value and creating a successful renewable energy company." In connection with the recently completed financings, Mr. Saltman entered into a lock up agreement pursuant to which he is only permitted to sell shares to cover his withholding taxes and related expenses.
